The High Five Community Excellence Award is a proud recognition of the work that outstanding individuals contribute to a better and more inclusive Central Coast.

In the 4th Quarter of 2021 KCBA highlighted Elfriede Murray for the High Five Community Excellence Award. Elfriede Murray has crocheted almost 2,000 pairs of Baby Booties for mothers around the Central Coast. She started this labor of love at the onset of the pandemic, when stricter delivery room protocols were adding extra stress for women during childbirth, especially for first time mothers. She's 81 years-old and the beloved Oma (German for "grandmother") to her local community in Castroville, and foremost to her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren who nominated her for this award. When asked how long she plans to continue handmaking and donating booties to local hospitals around the 831, she replied: "So far my hands don't bother me, when they start hurting I guess I'll have to do something then."
